THE AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

Founded 1858 · Incorporated 1865

Broadway Between 155th and 156th Streets
New York, N.Y. 10032

PURPOSES: The Society was founded for the collection and preservation of coins, medals, decorations and paper money and for the investigation of their history and other subjects connected therewith.

MEMBERSHIP: Applications for membership are welcomed from all interested in numismatics. Inquiries regarding membership should be addressed to the Secretary of the Society.

DUES: The annual dues for an Associate Membership are fifteen dollars. Issues of the Notes and Monographs, Museum Notes and Numismatic Literature are distributed to all members.

PUBLICATIONS: The American Numismatic Society Museum Notes is a scholarly journal containing articles on numismatic topics. The Numismatic Notes and Monographs consist of separately issued publications, each on a single topic. Numismatic Studies is a series accommodating works in a larger format. Numismatic Literature, published twice each year, is an international abstract bibliography of the current literature in the profession. The Society is also engaged in the systematic publication of its entire Greek coin collection in Sylloge Nummorum Graecorum: American Numismatic Society.

MUSEUM: The Society maintains a museum located in uptown Manhattan, New York City, which houses its offices, collections and library. Collections embrace coins of all periods from their inception to modern times, medals and decorations. Selections from its cabinets are on display in an exhibition. The library, consisting of about 25,000 volumes, covers all branches of numismatics.

The museum is open to Members and the public from 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. In addition, the public exhibition is open on Sundays from 1 to 4 P.M. The museum is closed on Mondays and the following holidays: New Year's Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Independence Day, Election Day, Thanksgiving Day, the fourth Friday in November, the fourth Saturday in November, December 24, Christmas Day. The public exhibition is open from 10 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on the fourth Friday and the fourth Saturday of November.

PREFACE

Numismatic Literature is a semiannual survey of current publications in or related to numismatics, with abstracts of their contents. Beginning with NL No. 79 (December 1967), bibliographic information and abstracts have been submitted by an international board of contributing editors, each of whom collects material published in his country. The contents and quality of NL reflect the participation of this editorial board and of individual scholars, whose cooperation can create a truly comprehensive bibliographic tool.

The revisions in format introduced in NL 81 have been maintained, to enable each reader to find and use material in his own field more easily, while benefitting from work published in peripheral fields. Each issue of NL is now paged separately, rather than consecutively within each issue, and an abstract can therefore be identified by the issue number together with the abstract number, for example, 81-1. Most entries are grouped under broad cultural, geographical or typological sections. In addition, the section Technology and Methodology lists works in which recently developed techniques for numismatic study are described or significantly applied. The Greek section correlates with the broad definition of Head's Historia Numorum. At the end of each section is a list of numbered cross references to abstracts with related material in other sections.

Author and subject indices are published at the back of each issue. The author index does not include references to the reviews, which are themselves alphabetically arranged by author. The hoard list is a separate list of abstracts in which reference is made to coin hoards.

Periodical titles are abbreviated whenever possible. A cumulative list of periodical title abbreviations is published in the March issue of even-numbered years. Intervening issues contain a cumulative list of additions. In this way, the list should become a record of the periodical publications in many fields in which numismatic material appears, and a convenient compilation of abbreviations for scholars.

Although NL is a bibliography of current publications, an effort is being made to include notices of somewhat older publications which are not readily available, or are published in languages which readers are not likely to know, and which were not discovered until the institution of the international board of contributing editors.

Comments and suggestions for improvement are welcome, and may be addressed to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society. The Editor thanks all those who have contributed to NL, and hopes that participation will continue to grow.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

The Contributing Editors listed below provide the international cooperation necessary for the publication of Numismatic Literature. Each Contributing Editor has assumed the responsibility for collecting and forwarding to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society titles and abstracts of all works of serious numismatic interest published in his area. In order that NL may offer the most complete, accurate and current coverage possible, each author is strongly urged to prepare an abstract of his own work at the time of publication, and to send it to the Contributing Editor of the country in which the work was published. A guide for the preparation of abstracts follows the list of Contributing Editors.

GUIDE FOR ABSTRACTORS

Entries in Numismatic Literature generally consist of two parts, the bibliographic information and the abstract.

Bibliographic Information

All entries must include the following information:

1. The full name(s) of the author(s)
2. The title of the publication in the original language, but in the Roman alphabet. If the publication is not written in English, French, German or Italian, the original title should be followed by a translation into one of these languages.

If the publication is an article in a journal, the following information must also be given:

3. Volume and/or issue number
4. Date of the journal
5. Date of publication, if it is different from the date of the journal
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is an article in a book of collected works, such as a Festschrift or proceedings of a congress, the following information must also be given:

3. Complete title of the collection
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is a book, the following information must also be given:

3. Edition number and editor's name, if any
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Total number of pages
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the content of the publication is general in nature and does not include specific information or arguments which should be brought to the reader's attention, and the title is fully descriptive of the contents, the bibliographic information alone may be given and the abstract omitted.

The Abstract

Definition. An abstract is a concise, objective summary or description of the content of a publication. It is different from a review in that an abstract does not offer critical comment or additions to the original work. Length. Abstracts may be from about 50 to 200 words in length, depending upon the importance or complexity of the publication. A long abstract may be desirable when the original publication is not readily available, or is written in a language most readers are not likely to know. Style and Language. Abstracts should be written in complete sentences. They may be submitted in English, French, German or Italian, but will be published in English. All abstracts must include the typewritten, full name of the abstractor.

Non-Current Titles

The International Editor of Numismatic Literature maintains a control file, grouped by country of publication, of all new title cards entered into the Society's library card catalogue. Cards are removed from this control file as the relevant titles are received from the Contributing Editors. Title cards in the control file are published as they become three years old in order to prevent omission of these titles. Publication of such entries is necessarily limited to bibliographical information only.

NOTE TO CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

Abstracts intended for publication in the September 1979 issue of Numismatic Literature should be received at the editorial office of the American Numismatic Society, Broadway at 155th Street, New York, N.Y. 10032, not later than May 15, 1979.

The annual reports offer a survey of the scientific and curatorial accomplishments, exhibitions, accessions, additions to the library, hoards acquired, publications and annual lectures. The hoards excavated in 1972 included one of 641 bracteates discovered at Pirna-Copitz and one of 606 groats found at Mutzschen. The groat hoard spanned the period 1369-1428 under the margraves of Meissen and landgraves of Thuringia. (Author)

Two possibly potin coins were found in an Iron Age pit (p. 68). Nine second- and third-century A.D. Roman coins were discovered (p. 187). Identifications were made by Richard Reece. (E. Marles)

3 BELLONI, GIAN GUIDO. Gabinetto Numismatico. Milan, Electra 1977. 2 vols. 401 pp. illus.

A complete catalogue is given of the Milan Coin Cabinet housed in the Castello Sforzesco. The listing comprises 107 Greek, 665 Roman (both Republican and Imperial) (Vol. 1) and 386 Italian coins (Vol. 2) with the latter following the arrangement of the Corpus Nummorum Italicorum. A bibliography and an index of names and mints are added. (Mark M. Salton)

4 BENDALL, SIMON. Some Numismatic Slang and Cant of the Late 18th Century. NCirc Vol. 85 No. 11 (Nov. 1977) pp. 490-91.

Sixty-one numismatic definitions taken from A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue of 1788 are discussed. (Author)

5 BENZON, GORM. De fandens penge [The devil's money]. Copenhagen, Kreditforeningen Danmark 1978. 109 pp. illus.

6 BERNAREGGI, ERNESTO. Struttura economica e monetazione del regno longobardo. QTicNumAntClas Vol. 5 (1976) pp. 331-76 illus.

The economy of the Longobard region was predominantly agricultural, with some industrial and craft production. Trade was based on use of coins. According to sources there were three gold coin denominations, of which only the tremissis is known to exist. Characteristics and development of coinage differed in the two parts of the kingdom, Padania and Tuscia. Small change consisted, up to the seventh century, of imitations of Byzantine silver coins or their fractions, preserved in large quantities, and later on of Longobard silver coins. (Sara Sorda)

9 British Museum. Dept. of Coins and Medals. Notable Acquisitions, 1969. BMQ Vol. 34 Nos. 3-4 (1970) p. 185.

10 BURGHARDT, ANTON. Soziologie des Geldes und der Inflation. Graz, Hermann Böhlaus 1977. 142 pp.

The social aspects of the medium of money are discussed. The differences between monetary sociology and inflationary sociology are dealt with. Monetary sociology pictures money as an instrument with social relevance, whereas inflationary sociology recognizes money as an agent of interaction between financial and non-financial processes. (Bernhard Koch)

The coins catalogued are 8 Greek, 180 Roman, 64 Vandal, 89 Byzantine (and 3 seals), 67 Roman, Vandal or Byzantine, 2 modern Tunisian, 1 unidentifiable modern token, 7 lead pieces and 198 unidentifiable issues.

The evolution of the art of portraiture on coins under the pressure of social conventions is studied. The early imperial portraits were mixtures of realism and idealism. With the advent of the Tetrarchy the portraits became hieratic. Only in the second half of the fourteenth century did the coin portrait become the image of an individual. (L. Lotringer)

The treatment of the whole field of ancient numismatics comprises an introduction and chapters on coins (basic terms and terminology), coin history, monetary history, methodology, and practical hints. The material is divided into the following parts: Greek coins, Rome (Republican, Imperial, Byzantine), Iran, East Iran, India, China, and Axum and includes related topics from premonetary forms of exchange to the seventh and eighth centuries A.D. in Europe and Asia respectively. Ca. 3,700 coins on 176 plates cover the typology and development of coinage in antiquity. They are arranged in didactically composed sets and include a number of coins rarely found in literature. A bibliography of more than 2,500 titles, descriptions of illustrated coins and tables on scripts, diagrams and sketches, measures and dates are added. (Author)

The first consists of 119 AE of Boeotia and 24 of surrounding mints and is dated ca. 200-150 B.C. The second is dated ca. 86 B.C. and contains 98 bronzes (including 33 uncertain, one of Antigonus Gonatas and the rest of Athens). The third is dated ca. A.D. 560-80 and contains 225 Roman Imperial, Vandalic and Ostrogothic issues. The fourth hoard is 15 Byzantine issues dateable ca. A.D. 1260-65.

The original specific gravity of coins of silver-copper alloy remains constant, even after oxidation over time, while the fineness increases from that of the original. This offers the possibility of determining the original fineness by calculating from the present specific gravity of the coins and keeping in mind the binomial data of the theoretical curve of the Cartesian graph. Non-destructive analysis of Athenian tetradrachms and of eastern imitations, both of the late fourth century, reveals a noticeable difference in the nature of the metal. The technique of isotopic analysis is subject to many limitations, yet it is one of the few methods of obtaining direct information about the geographic origin of lead-containing alloys. The respective magnitudes can be determined with precision through use of a spectrometer. The results are most meaningful in the case of objects not containing metal from batches of varying geographic origin. Consequently, the readings are more reliable where material of prehistoric origin is concerned. (Sara Sorda)

A relative chronology is suggested for five well-known types of the Palestinian Judaea Capta series. A further (unpublished) type is put at the end of the series. The reverse types of the Palestinian series are dependent on types minted in the imperial mints mainly in A.D. 71; the local issues cannot therefore predate 71. Two types of Agrippa II are closely related to the Palestinian Judaea Capta series. It is suggested that the era on Agrippa's coins of the years 14-35 is that starting in A.D. 61-62 and that Agrippa reigned until 96. Josephus completed the Antiquities and Life after the death of Agrippa II. Both works were therefore not completed before 95-96 or perhaps even later. (Author)

Only a firm chronology for the limits of its span of circulation can serve as the point of departure for a systematic evaluation of this currency. Typological and stylistic analyses are made and questions of a primarily technical nature are considered. A key series of hectae has been subjected to complete analysis, including all currently practicable methods of chemical and technical analysis, from measurement of specific gravity to isotopic activation analysis. The results are examined against the background of the coins' economic and historical context, and a multi-faceted reconstruction of economic policy from the reign of the Lydian king Alyattes to Solon the Athenian and Alexander the Great emerges. Four denominations of the Etruscan gold coins with lion head are known, all bearing indication of their current value. Their dating has so far not been supported by adequate documentation. They seem to have circulated in the area of Lucca, Pisa and Grosseto. The types are similar to those found on gold rings of Ionic-Asian tradition about the middle of the sixth century B.C., while technical characteristics recall Cypriote coins of 560-525 B.C. The weight system approaches that of the archaic Ionic-Asian electrum coinage. The unearthing in Tuscany of specimens of the Phocaean electrum coinage points to a direct influence of Ionic coins. It then follows that the Etruscan coins can be dated to the second quarter of the sixth century. (Sara Sorda)

Sextanti of Populonia with legend [fufluna or pufluna, vetalu and xa] have been thought to refer to a monetary alliance of Populonia, Vetulonia and Camars and are dated in the second half of the third century on the basis of their weight. There are linguistic and historical reasons for not accepting the theory of the alliance between the three cities. The legend [vetalu] probably refers to a personal name, perhaps that of a magistrate. [Xa] remains inexplicable. (Sara Sorda)

From the interpretation of Lycian inscriptions it follows that a Lycian ada represents the same value as a Persian siglos (both equalling 1.25 Attic drachms). The Lycian stater was called sixla and equalled two shekels). Individuals paid in sixla, communities in ada. Apparently the latter was only a unit of account. Correlation of ada and sixla was easy to obtain in western Lycia with its light-weight stater of ca. two Attic drachms. In the eastern part of Lycia, where heavy staters were in use, the denomination ada rarely occurs. See also NL 99-146.

The origins of the lily as emblem and heraldic symbol are traced from its supposed beginnings as the flower which in Leviticus 8.9 formed part of the high priestly diadem of Aaron to the European fleur-de-lis. The Yehud series of Persian-period coins are extensively discussed, with attempts at providing a chronological sequence. Reference is also made to Islamic and Crusader issues showing the lily as emblem of the issuing authority. (Arnold Spaer)

The discovery in Padua province of three small bronzes, of Ptolemy II Philadelphus, Ptolemy V Epiphanes and an unidentified Ptolemaic ruler, respectively, seems to point toward an active circulation of Ptolemaic bronze in the northern Adriatic area. The assumption is confirmed by hoards unearthed in Yugoslavia and eastern Sicily. From the northern Adriatic such coins might also have reached Germany, Austria and Switzerland by way of the river trade routes. The use of Ptolemaic bronze coins in the Adriatic region induced the Romans to adopt the sextantal reduction of the as in 212 B.C. (Sara Sorda)

The coins of the "signing artists" are divided into five varieties on the basis of exergue symbols. This, in combination with the results of die study, makes plausible the idea of a division of monetary production between two workshops. One is that of Eumenes and Sosion, onto which the personality of Euainetos, with dolphin/l symbol, is grafted. The second workshop is that of Kimon, more or less contemporaneous with the other, with ear of corn and production by various artists. The other three symbols are tied to a single quadriga die and are probably the result of special assignments. (Sara Sorda)

193 HOLMES, N. Some Iron-Age Coins from Hacheston, Suffolk. NC Ser. 7 Vol. 18 (1978) pp. 176-78 illus.

The finds from the excavation included five Iron Age coins of particular rarity. Two of these are Icenian silver minims of the same class as D.F. Allen, "The Origins of Coinage in Britain: A Reappraisal," Problems of the Iron Age in Southern Britain. Edited by S.S. Frere (London 1958) pp. 97-308, nos. 163-67. One example shows a reverse die link with Allen no. 164. Two coins are of a previously unpublished class of silver which probably formed part of the Icenian coinage. The last coin is the bronze core of a contemporary forgery of a Gallo-Belgic DC gold quarter stater. (Author)

194 HOUGHTON, ARTHUR. The Seleucid Mint at Lampsacus. ANSMN No. 23 (1978) pp. 59-68 illus.

A previously unpublished tetradrachm of Antiochus Hierax explicitly links two coin series assigned by Edward T. Newell separately to Lampsacus and Abydus; in fact, the numismatic evidence strongly supports an attribution of both groups to the former mint. A reordering of Lampsacus's output during this period based on the new material suggests a heavy demand for coinage throughout most of Hierax's reign, leading to hurried and makeshift production methods which became more orderly only toward the end of the period under discussion. (Author)

Three more series of Punic silver coins are dealt with: series 2 (head of goddess/horse with palm tree, from ca. 350-340 to ca. 320-315 B.C.); series 3 (head of goddess/horse head with palm tree, from ca. 320-315 to near the end of the century); and series 4 (head in Phrygian cap/lion and palm tree, contemporary with the earlier part of series 3). Lilybaeum is strongly favored as mint place, although the inscription 'MMHNT "people of the camp" does not exclude a travelling mint. Inscriptions and symbols (both with facsimiles) and types are discussed, using archaeological evidence as well, and a catalogue gives further details. (Hansjörg Bloesch)

225 MINÌ, ADOLFO. Monete antiche di bronzo della zecca di Siracusa. Palermo, Cassa Centrale di Risparmio V.E. per le Province Siciliane 1977. 191 pp. illus.

A survey of the Syracusan bronze coinage is preceded by a synopsis of Syracusan historic and monetary development and by an index of symbols encountered on Syracusan bronze coins. The catalogue quotes literature, museums and collections where the listed pieces have been found, and indicates the weight or weight range wherever possible. The majority of the principal types are illustrated in the text. (Mark M. Salton)

Two pieces formerly attributed to the Turones are discussed. Other coins of the same type are classified according to the orientation of the reverse bull head and the quality of the engraving. The coins were probably issued on the initiative of local authorities, for Epiais-Rhus, where they were discovered, was the seat of a pagus. (L. Lotringer)

Evidence from coin hoards discovered in Dacia is the basis for examination of economic life before and during the reign of Burebista. Production forces developed, especially in the second century B.C. In the first half of the first century B.C. they reached their apex, as the burial in Dacia of 70 hoards of Roman Republican denarii proves. (Author)

It is suggested that the era of the various cities, Aspendus, Perge, Phaselis and Sillyum, was the same, and a return to Seyrig's chronology (RN 1963) is advised, placing the beginning of the era in 221-220 B.C. Bucharest, University of Bucharest, Faculty of History and Philosophy 1978. 24 pp.

Among problems stressed are the part played in the economic life of the western shore of the Euxine Sea by different kinds of coins, starting with arrow-shaped ones and going on with issues of Histria, Apollonia, Mesembria and of the tribes from the Pangean region and the Odrysian kingdom. There was also diffusion of foreign coins (especially staters of Cyzicus) and the rôle of trade with Athens is studied. It is certain that copper and iron were provided by local mining resources and that precious metals were imported (there are tetradrachms of Odessus and Mesembria over Macedonia Prima and Thasos issues). The coins issued from the fourth-first centuries B.C. are studied, including pseudo-Alexanders and pseudo-Lysimachi of Tyras, Histria, Tomis, Callatis, Dionysopolis, Odessus, Mesembria, Apollonia, and Cabyle, and the issues of the local basileus in Dobrudja and of Thracian kings. The foreign relations of the Greek cities are investigated on the basis of inscriptions on stone and pottery as well as on money. (Author)

The coins struck at mints operating in Sicily even before Carthage herself struck (Motya, Solus, Eryx, perhaps Panormus; later Malta and Cossura), are distinct from the others struck at mints instituted by Carthage on her own account in the occupied territories which formed part of her Sicilian and Sardinian provinces. The Greek world was the stimulus to both groups. The series from Sicily, Sardinia and the smaller islands are recorded analytically. (Sara Sorda)

Local circulation is studied and 641 issues found in the Himera city area are classified. Bronzes are mostly of the mid-fifth century and testify to the general use of coinage. Coins bear witness to the fact that the economy of the polis flourished noticeably, and at the same time there was a growing and quickening circulation and a slight inflation. The relative numbers of emissions for each Himeran series are discussed. Circulation of foreign coins at Himera is also treated. (Sara Sorda)

After the defeat of the Dionysian tyranny in Sicily in 344 B.C., Syracusan bronze litrae of the Athena/starfish series were overstruck in Dalmatia with the types of the "Ionios' series" (young male head/dolphin above waves). These overstrikes represent the earliest bronze currency issued in the area, but cannot be assigned to the mint of Issa, as has been suggested. (Author)

The 34 "Athena" tetradrachms described were only recently recognized as having a common origin (ICGH 1675), but are probably a fraction of a larger find. The coins were buried ca. 301 B.C. and with the Delta hoard of 1896 (IGCH 1671), a slightly earlier parallel, they help document the manner in which Ptolemy I succeeded in isolating his money economy from the outside world. During the first Tetrarchy the panegyrics and coins attribute Aeternitas to the Augusti as introducers of a new era of prosperity and security. During the second Tetrarchy the Aeternitas Augustorum does not appear on the coins even though it was celebrated in imperial propaganda; instead we find the Perpetuitas Augustorum, which must indicate the stability of the tetrarchic system (even given the replacement of its members). Lactantius says in detail that Diocletian celebrated the vicennalia in Rome on 20 Nov. 303, but does not mention Diocletian, whose presence in Rome on that date is still under discussion. The same source also records the hostility of the Romans toward the emperor, a fact which might explain the absence of aurei of the Rome mint to commemorate the event. From Rome, Diocletian travelled to Nicomedia, passing through Ravenna, where he inaugurated the ninth consulate. During his short stays at Milan and Aquileia, as well as in Nicomedia, he had aurei struck, all of similar types, in commemoration of the vicennalia, both in his own name and in that of Maximian. A hoard found in 1846 at Rouen containing 210 pieces of Carausius poses the problem of whether Carausius struck coins in that city. The antoniniani of Rouen are essentially known only from the hoard. The nine gold issues can be divided into three series. The time of issue at Rouen must have been at least from the end of 290-beginning of 291 to late 291-early 292. The fact that no coins in this series have been found at Boulogne suggests that a workshop at Rouen was a probability, in spite of arguments that it was situated at Boulogne. (L. Lotringer)

"Eternity" makes her appearance on coins rather late, according to written sources from the period of Titus onward. From then on her representation becomes more frequent. The concept refers to other persons, as well as to the emperor, and to gods and semi-gods. Later on it becomes definitely associated with the emperor, independently from his origin, imperial or not. "Eternity" disappears from coins in the fourth century, just when her use by the panegyrics becomes particularly conspicuous. The conquered enemy on the coins takes on a rather ridiculed character, obviously meant as a show of contempt. (Sara Sorda)

The meaning and limitations of the term "propaganda" are discussed, in its application to the allusions of political character appearing on Roman coins. Monetary types were meant to propagandize actions or events, as contrasted to their function of popularizing public projects to be undertaken or of spreading political ideas. The celebration of an ancestor's exploits on Republican coins had to be approved by a magistrate other than the moneyer himself. (Sara Sorda)

Fides Legionum were ascribed, first the acclamation, and only secondly the permanency, of Septimius Severus. The spread of this change is chronologically and geographically limited and ties in with the policy of outlying mints as contrasted to that of Rome. The typology of the denarius of L. Aquilius Florus (BMCRE Vol. 1, p. 7, no. 38) has to do with the ideology of Augustus, not with the moneyer personally. The radiate head of Sol is to be related to the diffusion of his cult at Rome, and especially with the relationship of Apollo and Sol which Augustus used to emphasize the relationship of Sol and princeps. The quadriga of the reverse also alludes to the cult of Sol: the object which it carries is a small palm. (Sara Sorda)

The reverse scene on the denarius of L. Aemilius Buca does not represent Sulla's dream, but rather that of Endymion. The latter myth, popular toward the end of the Republican period, forms part of the funerary rites. On the denarius under discussion it is brought into relation to the recent death of Caesar. The coin may have been struck between the end of April and June 44. (Sara Sorda)

The style of dress of the obverse imperial bust is always related to the reverse type; when that is of a civil nature, the bust is nude or draped; when the reverse is military, the bust is cuirassed. The coinage of Marcus Aurelius proves these theories. (Sara Sorda)

An early Augustan coin (RIC 25) is presented from an historical and stylistic point of view. The reverse may be a common and syncretistic representation of Apollo, Octavian's personal tutelary god, carrying the message of victory at Actium. Twenty-seven Roman coins of the third and fourth centuries A.D. are listed. The range suggests occupation from at least the beginning of the fourth century to the time of Theodosius and possibly later. The concentration of coins of ca. 320-30 suggests that there may have been a small hoard, possibly a purse of coins, either lost or deposited ca. 332.(Author)

378 HILL, PHILIP V. The "De Germanis" Arches on the Coins of Claudius I. NCirc Vol. 86 No. 3 (March 1978) pp. 122-23 illus.

The six types of "German" arches depicted on coins struck either in the name of Claudius I or in that of his father, Nero Drusus, are reduced to two: the Arcus Drusi, spanning the Via Appia to the south of Rome, and the Arcus Claudii, in the Via Lata region. This latter may be identified with an arch of the Aqua Virgo which was converted into a triumphal arch by Claudius in A.D. 46. (Author)

It is argued that much of the coinage of Severus of 211 was issued posthumously and that he was not omitted from the issues until some three months later, about the time that Caracalla and Geta arrived in Rome (4 May). The (posthumous) inclusion of Severus in the issues which celebrated the peace and the return to Rome was clearly intended to convince the Romans that before his death Severus had ordered the withdrawal. The meanings of the types of the issues, both before and after the omission of Severus from the coinage, and the propaganda implicit in them, are discussed in detail. (Author)

The façade of a large and imposing temple is depicted on sestertii of Tiberius struck in A.D. 36. From the cult statue the temple is clearly identified as that of Concordia in the Roman forum. The statues before the building and on the roof are also identified, in many cases differently from those in the BMCRE description. Some are shown in situ and others are seen as having been transferred from the interior of the temple. It is suggested that the statues are mainly those listed by Pliny the Elder, whose catalogue probably described the most important pieces. (Author)

Over 4,000 coins from a hoard of tetrarchic folles (ca. A.D. 295-310) found in northern Sinai are catalogued and discussed. The hoard originally contained between 10,000 and 15,000 pieces and provides a useful basis for the analysis of the metrology of folles from eastern mints hitherto only scantily reported. The geographical distribution pattern of coins from eastern mints is compatible with that of other hoards of this period found in the eastern half of the empire. (Authors)

A hoard of over 1,550 Constantinian bronzes of 330-41 is studied. The problems posed by the inclusion in the hoard of 94 contemporary imitations are considered. Imitations are normally inferior in size, weight and silver content to regular issues, although in style they often approach the quality of genuine pieces. The motives underlying their production and their possible rôle in the coinage are examined. (Author)

In 1897 Giulio Bignami (1839-1915) sold his collection of Roman Republican coins to the Museo Capitolino in Rome. It consisted of 2,220 coins, of which 8 were gold, 1,105 silver and the rest bronze. From a handwritten catalogue by Bignami, it appears he also bought from private collections. (Sara Sorda)

The [nummi radia]ti quinque proposed by the editors of the imperial constitution of Aphrodisias are discussed. Examination of the prices reported in the tariffs reveals that the reform doubled the value of the denarius and the antoninianus, to two and four denarii respectively, and raised the follis to 25 denarii. The edited phrase proposed is [quindi vigin]ti quinque. The signs XXI and K on folles are not indications of value, but rather mint signs. (Sara Sorda)

The oath scene on the Italic League coins of the Social War period differs profoundly from that on the "gold oath coins," to which it has generally been likened. It alludes rather to the oath taken by the members of the Italic League in 91 B.C., which had the character of a conspiracy. The League members thus emphasized the act of founding their anti-Roman coalition. The violent form of the oath was indirectly referred to by Livy, in the passage about the oath of Aquilonia in 293 B.C. (Sara Sorda)

A hoard of silver trachea of Theodore I of Nicaea, containing significant die links, reveals that, on some occasions at least, the obverse (convex) surface of scyphate coins was struck by two skew blows, one for each half of the design. These two blows were even given by two different dies, bearing unmatching details. Thus, earlier classifications depending on these details are no longer valid. This method of production was general throughout the era of scyphate usage. (Authors)

The Thessalonican coinage in the mid-thirteenth century is discussed, and part of a hoard, which included no less than 115 coins of John Ducas, is published. Several new types described not only increase the number of Series II types of John Ducas but indicate that all this emperor's Series I and II types were also issued in Series III. The view is advanced that the Series III coins in the name of John Ducas were official Byzantine issues of the mint of Thessalonica, produced for use in the northeast Balkans, where Series I and II coins did not circulate unless clipped down, and that their production continued well into the reign of John III Vatatzes. The heavy series which followed was minted in Alexandria under Sāsānian auspices in 618-28 and consisted of four denominations: 12-, 6- and 3-nummi and 1-nummus pieces. A hitherto misattributed coin (DOC Justinian I, no. 375) is identified as one of these 1-nummus pieces. (Author)

Five groups of gold coins of doubtful mint attribution are discussed. By means of comparison of their style and fabric with those of coins of known origin and by taking into account the scanty find evidence, one group (A) can be attributed to Thessalonica for the Illyrian prefecture, the second (B) to the African prefecture (probably struck in Carthage); another (E) to Sicily (probably struck in Syracuse). Of the remaining two groups (C) is also probably Sicilian, the other (D) might be from Sicily or Rome. (Author)

A comparison of imperial representations on seals and coins shows how numismatics may help to identify bullae, especially those of the commerkiarioi. Sigillography confirms some doubtful coins, such as Theophano's follis. A survey of their respective evolution follows: seals, always less conservative than coins, are autonomous in a first period, close to silver coinage in the iconoclast period, and later on to gold coinage before diverging entirely at the end of the twelfth century.

A pre-1869 discovery of a hoard of 24 Macedonia Prima and three Thasos tetradrachms in the neighborhood of Zimnicea is recorded. Of some 2,000 Byzantine coins also discovered in the vicinity of Zimnicea, 70 issues of the Comnenus era were bought by the Antiquities Museum. A third hoard, of Byzantine gold coins discovered at Dolheşti in 1902, contained, among other items, two tetarteroi of Basil II and Constantine VIII. (Bucur Mitrea)

Three pendants with gold coins were among items found in the necropolis of San Giovanni at Cividale. One had a triens of Justinian I of Constantinople, one a copy of a triens of Justinian from the same mint and the third an anomalous issue with nonsense legend, bust of emperor and rev.: Victory. This last is a work of the sixth century, possibly of a Lombard trying to reconcile the tradition of bracteate amulets with pseudo-Imperial coinage. (Sara Sorda)

Some 700 deniers of Baldwin III (1143-63) from a hoard discovered many years ago are the basis for a classification of the type. The "rough" and the "smooth" styles are treated separately, and each is divided into a number of chronological groups by reference to the lettering, the details of the Tower of David, experimental variants, and the evidence of die linkage. Blundered legends and the use of secret marks are considered. Chemical analyses of the coins are discussed, as is their weight distribution. Die estimation is used to suggest that the "rough" coins were struck from about 550 reverse dies, the "smooth" deniers from about 560, and the obols from at least 30 reverse dies. The relationship of the two styles is assessed: the available evidence is inconclusive, but it could imply two mints, rather than two consecutive issues. Three foreign coins included in the hoard are illustrated.(Author)

The traditional attribution of the Crusader Tower of David coins to the city of Jerusalem under siege by Saladin in 1187 can no longer be accepted, since much of the evidence for this attribution clearly conflicts with that provided by the coins themselves. A reattribution to the mint of Beirut during the period 1184-86, while the city was in the custody of Raymond III of Tripoli, is postulated on the basis of evidence concerning obverse and reverse types, material and module, provenance of known specimens, and subsequent overstriking with Beirut types attributed to John I of Ibelin, Lord of Beirut (ca. 1200-36). A classification into two major types is proposed, and there is a catalogue of 30 recorded specimens, including three Beirut overstrikes. (Author)

Several of the revolutionary movements during the reign of Marwan II issued their own coinage, frequently with distinctive slogans. The activities of the revolutionary groups are discussed in light of their extant coinage. Otherwise similar coins are grouped on the basis of differences in legend and annulet configurations. These groupings are shown to correspond to political and military developments mentioned in the literary sources. A catalogue of all the known specimens is provided. (Author)

During this period the Chinese mints were restriking the provincial imperial, national imperial and 1912 memento coinages; striking the republican Yuan Shih-kai coinage, or producing their own separate provincial coinages. The available mintage figures for the main mints are collated and analyzed and attempts are made to identify the type of coin produced at each mint. The workings of some of the minor mints are examined and attention is drawn to occasional anomalies in the catalogues. (Author)

Wider monetary issues are considered in chapters on the supply of bullion—mined, confiscated, captured or attracted in the course of trade—and on the nature of the circulating medium. The final chapter assesses the actions of government, both in its traditional rôle as guardian of the coinage, and in the field of fiscal exploitation. Appendices summarize the weights and fineness of gold and silver, the available mint output figures, and surviving mint contracts.

In nineteenth-century royal mint practice dies were sunk with punches carrying complete inscriptions, and misspelling varieties originated in die repair, an incorrect single letter punch occasionally being employed to strengthen a weak point in the inscription. Thus most nineteenth-century blundered die varieties have an incorrect letter punched over a correct one. A list of the 19 varieties known is given. (Author)

Items 17 and 18 in W.J. Hocking, Catalogue of the Coins, Tokens, Medals, Dies and Seals in the Museum of the Royal Mint Vol. 2, p. 5, are the dies from which the 1658 Cromwell crown pieces were struck. Hocking had incorrectly identified them as matrices. It is suggested that the lettered edges on the larger Cromwell pieces were applied with a parallel bar edge marking device similar to the later Castaing machine, rather than by the stencil-like steel strip suggested by G.F. Ansell and endorsed by Hocking in NC 1908, p. 56. The other 20 pre-1760 tools catalogued by Hocking as fully-lettered matrices are also dies. (Author)

In the late 1330s and early 1340s England faced a currency shortage that was not successfully alleviated before the introduction of new gold and silver coin in 1351. The new coins, however, coupled with the loss of population after the Black Death, helped to push up prices, which remained high in the 60s and early 70s. It was not until the 1390s, when the money supply had been reduced, that prices began to drop again. Although many factors, including war, weather, and the state of the export market, did influence prices in the period 1338-1400, the new gold coins acted as a kind of catalyst, pulling prices first in one direction and then in another. A large hoard of English, Scottish and Continental sterlings has a probable terminus post quem of 1318, derived from coins of Robert Bruce. A date of deposit as late as ca. 1335 is quite possible, and the coins may well have been concealed at about the time of the Irish expeditionary force of that year, or when the force holding nearby Rothesay castle in the English interest surrendered to the Scots. The proportions of Edward Classes I-IX and X in the hoard are problematic. (Author)

A drawing in the hand of Sienese artist and architect Baldassare Peruzzi of a screw press is associated with a document in the Archivio di Stato, Siena that refers to Peruzzi's activity as a mint master around 1530. It is suggested that this drawing is the first representation of the screw press, invented by Bramante (ca. 1506) and later described and used by Benvenuto Cellini. Drawing and document point to the early diffusion of the screw press in Italy prior to its use in France and Germany around 1550. (Author)

Examination of the organization of the mint of Florence in relation to other contemporaneous offices, personnel, mint masters, techniques, costs and receipts is followed by a history of the coins struck to 1533. The production of gold and silver issues is examined on a semi-annual basis and their use on the exchanges is considered. (Sara Sorda)

784 JUNG, HEIDELINDE. Zur Geschichte des Münzwesens von 500 bis 800. Ausstellungskatalog des Oberösterreichischen Landesmuseums (Linz 1977) pp. 39-52.

An exhibition in the Upper Austrian Museum at Linz which dealt with the Bavarian epoch initiated a study of the monetary conditions in modern Upper Austria during the late ancient and early mediaeval periods. Reports of coin hoards, including finds in burial grounds, and written monetary accounts in the Lex Baiuvariorum and in the customs regulations of Raffelstett served as sources. (Bernhard Koch)

The problems studied are the economic situation of Wallachia at the end of the eighteenth and beginning of the nineteenth centuries, the variations of the ratio between the value of gold and that of silver on the international market, and currency in the Ottoman Empire (the value of the Turkish piaster and the cost of precious metals on different markets) and in Wallachia, including devalued and forged coins. A schedule of the rate of exchange of different gold and silver coins is added.

The Vergulde Draeck was known to be carrying 78,600 guilders (amounting to some 40,000 coins) when she struck a reef off the coast of western Australia in April 1656. Nearly 20,000 coins have been recovered following underwater archaeological excavations which took place in 1972. The cargo of coins consisted of reales minted ca. 1650, mostly of Mexican origin, but containing a percentage of other Spanish American mint issues and some from metropolitan Spain as well. A catalogue is included. (E. Marles)

PRIMITIVE MONEY

1183 FRIŠOVÁ-KUČEROVSKA, TATÁNA. Předmincovní platidla [Premonetary media of exchange]. Moravské NumZprávy Vol. 12 (1970) pp. 18-42. German summary.

The ingot in the form of a bull skin is rectangular and weighs 26 k. This premonetary form is dated in the second half of the second century B.C. Similar ingots exist in the Aegean culture. (Iordanka Youroukova)

1185 WELLS, H. BARTLETT. The Arrow-Money of Thrace and Southern Russia. SAN Vol. 9 No. 1 (Winter 1978) pp. 6-9, 12; No. 2 (Spring 1978) pp. 24-26, 31.

European literature concerning small arrowhead-like or willow leaf-like bronze castings found along the western and northwestern shores of the Black Sea at sites of a period roughly 550-475 B.C. is reviewed. The castings differ in form, manufacturing technology, and geographical distribution from functional Scythian-Sarmatian arrowheads of the same time. The conclusion of recent Rumanian writers that the castings are the product not of native peoples, but of Milesian Greek colonists settled along these coastal strips is reasonable. The objects were a form of money intended for trading with the native peoples. (Author)

THE AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

Founded 1858 · Incorporated 1865

Broadway Between 155th and 156th Streets
New York, N.Y. 10032

PURPOSES: The Society was founded for the collection and preservation of coins, medals, decorations and paper money and for the investigation of their history and other subjects connected therewith.

MEMBERSHIP: Applications for membership are welcomed from all interested in numismatics. Inquiries regarding membership should be addressed to the Secretary of the Society.

DUES: The annual dues for an Associate Membership are fifteen dollars. Issues of the Notes and Monographs, Museum Notes and Numismatic Literature are distributed to all members.

PUBLICATIONS: The American Numismatic Society Museum Notes is a scholarly journal containing articles on numismatic topics. The Numismatic Notes and Monographs consist of separately issued publications, each on a single topic. Numismatic Studies is a series accommodating works in a larger format. Numismatic Literature, published twice each year, is an international abstract bibliography of the current literature in the profession. The Society is also engaged in the systematic publication of its entire Greek coin collection in Sylloge Nummorum Graecorum: American Numismatic Society.

MUSEUM: The Society maintains a museum located in uptown Manhattan, New York City, which houses its offices, collections and library. Collections embrace coins of all periods from their inception to modern times, medals and decorations. Selections from its cabinets are on display in an exhibition. The library, consisting of about 25,000 volumes, covers all branches of numismatics.

The museum is open to Members and the public from 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. In addition, the public exhibition is open on Sundays from 1 to 4 P.M. The museum is closed on Mondays and the following holidays: New Year's Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Independence Day, Election Day, Thanksgiving Day, the fourth Friday in November, the fourth Saturday in November, December 24, Christmas Day. The public exhibition is open from 10 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on the fourth Friday and the fourth Saturday of November.

PREFACE

Numismatic Literature is a semiannual survey of current publications in or related to numismatics, with abstracts of their contents. Beginning with NL No. 79 (December 1967), bibliographic information and abstracts have been submitted by an international board of contributing editors, each of whom collects material published in his country. The contents and quality of NL reflect the participation of this editorial board and of individual scholars, whose cooperation can create a truly comprehensive bibliographic tool.

The revisions in format introduced in NL 81 have been maintained, to enable each reader to find and use material in his own field more easily, while benefitting from work published in peripheral fields. Each issue of NL is now paged separately, rather than consecutively within each issue, and an abstract can therefore be identified by the issue number together with the abstract number, for example, 81-1. Most entries are grouped under broad cultural, geographical or typological sections. In addition, the section Technology and Methodology lists works in which recently developed techniques for numismatic study are described or significantly applied. The Greek section correlates with the broad definition of Head's Historia Numorum. At the end of each section is a list of numbered cross references to abstracts with related material in other sections.

Author and subject indices are published at the back of each issue. The author index does not include references to the reviews, which are themselves alphabetically arranged by author. The hoard list is a separate list of abstracts in which reference is made to coin hoards.

Periodical titles are abbreviated whenever possible. A cumulative list of periodical title abbreviations is published in the March issue of even-numbered years. Intervening issues contain a cumulative list of additions. In this way, the list should become a record of the periodical publications in many fields in which numismatic material appears, and a convenient compilation of abbreviations for scholars.

Although NL is a bibliography of current publications, an effort is being made to include notices of somewhat older publications which are not readily available, or are published in languages which readers are not likely to know, and which were not discovered until the institution of the international board of contributing editors.

Comments and suggestions for improvement are welcome, and may be addressed to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society. The Editor thanks all those who have contributed to NL, and hopes that participation will continue to grow.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

The Contributing Editors listed below provide the international cooperation necessary for the publication of Numismatic Literature. Each Contributing Editor has assumed the responsibility for collecting and forwarding to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society titles and abstracts of all works of serious numismatic interest published in his area. In order that NL may offer the most complete, accurate and current coverage possible, each author is strongly urged to prepare an abstract of his own work at the time of publication, and to send it to the Contributing Editor of the country in which the work was published. A guide for the preparation of abstracts follows the list of Contributing Editors.

GUIDE FOR ABSTRACTORS

Entries in Numismatic Literature generally consist of two parts, the bibliographic information and the abstract.

Bibliographic Information

All entries must include the following information:

1. The full name(s) of the author(s)
2. The title of the publication in the original language, but in the Roman alphabet. If the publication is not written in English, French, German or Italian, the original title should be followed by a translation into one of these languages.

If the publication is an article in a journal, the following information must also be given:

3. Volume and/or issue number
4. Date of the journal
5. Date of publication, if it is different from the date of the journal
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is an article in a book of collected works, such as a Festschrift or proceedings of a congress, the following information must also be given:

3. Complete title of the collection
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is a book, the following information must also be given:

3. Edition number and editor's name, if any
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Total number of pages
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the content of the publication is general in nature and does not include specific information or arguments which should be brought to the reader's attention, and the title is fully descriptive of the contents, the bibliographic information alone may be given and the abstract omitted.

The Abstract

Definition. An abstract is a concise, objective summary or description of the content of a publication. It is different from a review in that an abstract does not offer critical comment or additions to the original work.
Length. Abstracts may be from about 50 to 200 words in length, depending upon the importance or complexity of the publication. A long abstract may be desirable when the original publication is not readily available, or is written in a language most readers are not likely to know.
Style and Language. Abstracts should be written in complete sentences. They may be submitted in English, French, German or Italian, but will be published in English. All abstracts must include the typewritten, full name of the abstractor.

Non-Current Titles

The International Editor of Numismatic Literature maintains a control file, grouped by country of publication, of all new title cards entered into the Society's library card catalogue. Cards are removed from this control file as the relevant titles are received from the Contributing Editors. Title cards in the control file are published as they become three years old in order to prevent omission of these titles. Publication of such entries is necessarily limited to bibliographical information only.

Abstracts intended for publication in the March 1980 issue of Numismatic Literature should be received at the editorial office of the American Numismatic Society, Broadway at 155th Street, New York, N.Y. 11032, not later than November 15, 1979.

A statistical analysis of die usage in five samples (collections and hoards) of coins dating from the fifth century B.C. to the seventeenth A.D. shows that it is not valid to assume that all dies strike equal numbers of coins. Dies from all periods follow an exponential aging law, many dies striking only a few coins and a few dies striking many times the average. The effects of selection within the samples studied can also be seen in the lifetime curves illustrated. (Author)

An inventory is given of ceramics from 44 hoards whose coins make it possible to date the ceramics. There are problems, however, in using the hoards for dating the ceramics. The most important hoard in this respect is the Viking-Age Bornholm find, whose pot is 200 years older than the time of deposit of the hoard itself. (Jørgen Steen Jensen)

The geographical area covered ranges from the Atlantic seaboard to the Shantung peninsula; Indo-European, Turko-Mongol, Iranian-Afghan, peninsular Indian and Ceylonese issues, the kingdoms of southeast Asia in the pre-Thai period and early Chinese coinage are among the subjects covered, along with intaglio seals, mainly from Iran, and some Indian and Dvaravati votive clay sealings. Historical introductions and, where possible, dynastic lists, are presented. Legends are usually rendered in their original script, with transliterations or translations where necessary. There are tables illustrating the various scripts. Appendices on weights and values and a bibliography are included. (Author)

One hundred eighty new and 65 previously-published chemical and metrological analyses are reported. It is concluded that the weight, size and shape of Augustan quadrantes changed from lighter, larger thinner coins at the beginning to heavier, small and thicker coins at the end; that the college Pulcher-Taurus-Regulus precedes the college Lamia-Silius-Annius rather than follows it, as is now commonly believed; that the mean and range of trace metal contents vary from issue to issue within a single year, indicating that not all issues were produced during precisely the same period; and that die duplicates have a greater incidence of similar chemical compositions than coins sharing a single die.

Byzantine "copper" coins, the small change of the Comnenian monetary system, are shown by X-ray fluorescence analysis of 68 specimens (26 types) to fall into two categories. "Constantinopolitan" issues, surprisingly, contain three to five percent silver and may originally have been struck for ceremonial purposes. The "Thessalonican" issues are by contrast almost pure copper. The interpretation of the Corinth and Athens finds, where the billon varieties are scarce, may now need to be reconsidered. The argument for an attribution to Thessalonica is questioned. (Author)

Ca. ten large bronze coins of Rhodes of the time of Domitian seen in Belgium seem to belong to a hoard found in southwestern Turkey around 1975. Other pieces from the hoard arrived in Germany and the Low Countries. One of the coins should be dated A.D. 81/2. The emperor wears a radiate crown over the laurel crown; the reverse has Victory l. and the name of the empress Domitia. (Paul Naster)

In Hebrew.

The proceedings of a symposium are presented. Barag supported by Kindler claims that the Judaea Capta issues struck in Palestine chronologically follow the Roman issues on this theme and that the coins in the names of Agrippa II with names of the Flavian emperors are closely connected. Hence the dates on the latter coins must be based on that era of Agrippa II which begins in A.D. 61 so that the last date on his coins (Year 35) would fall in 96. In Barag's view all coins struck by Agrippa II under the Flavians bear dates based on the A.D. 61 era. Meshorer maintains that only the bilingual issues of Agrippa are dated by the era of Agrippa beginning in 61 while the other issues struck under the Flavians are dated by Agrippa's era beginning in 56. The coinages of Dionysius of Syracuse are analyzed and, in certain cases, redated. It is argued that Dionysius was a forerunner of the Hellenistic kings, especially the Ptolemies, in creating a fiduciary coinage in bronze and reserving the precious metals for large denominations, such as 100-litrae pieces in gold and decadrachms in silver. The late cistophori of Apameia, which may be distinguished from the earlier emissions by the different form of ethnic employed, and by the inclusion of the magistrate's name, are to be dated after 133 B.C. The hoard evidence for the 22 issues listed in the catalogue strongly suggests a concentrated emission of short duration, begun in the early 80s B.C., and suspended in ca. 67 B.C. The inception of the late cistophori should probably be associated with the provision of Mithradatic funds for the city's recovery, during the campaign of Mithradates VI in 88 B.C.

Study of density and alloys confirms that classes 1-3 of the staters are issues of the Ambiani and classes 4-6 are issues of the Morini. The alloys of the quarter staters with ship indicate the biface coins (classes 1-3) are Ambianic and the uniface coins (classes 4-6) are Morinic. The quarter staters may be the extreme simplification of the biface Ambianic staters, but this necessitates some redating. (L. Lotringer)

It is argued that there was no Seleucid mint in Jerusalem and that the issues of Antiochus VII (BMC 69) and Antiochus VIII (Babelon, Rois de Syrie 1448) hitherto attributed to Jerusalem were struck in Ascalon, which provided most of the bronze coinage of Judaea. The Hasmonaean coinage was issued when the supply of royal Seleucid copper coins from Ascalon ceased. The first coinage of Herod the Great, dated Year Three (BMC 1-19), was issued before he conquered Jerusalem and was probably also struck at Ascalon. (Arnold Spaer)

273 ROBINSON, PAUL H. A Local Iron Age Coinage in Silver and Perhaps Gold in Wiltshire. BNJ Vol. 47 (1977, publ. 1978) pp. 5-20 illus.

The find-spots of the regular Dobunnic coins in gold and silver are restricted to the extreme west and north of Wiltshire. In central and eastern Wiltshire occurs a silver coinage stylistically related to the Dobunnic silver series but probably issued by a separate authority. There are minor links with a gold series which may also be a product of the area of central-eastern Wiltshire. Other silver coins possibly attributable to this are are also discussed. (Author)

No part of the Roman Empire appears more Greek than western Anatolia. Yet, in many instances, prehellenic architectural forms are traceable on Greek Imperial coins. The custom of using an altar as a shrine sacred to a deity, that is, as a temple, has a long history in the Near East. Such exceptional sacred monuments are shown on the coins of Parium, Selge, Sardis, Sagalassus, Zela and Minassa-Conana. In the case of Parium, Selge and Sardis, the evidence shows with certainty that

A Corinthian loomweight in the Museum of Art and Archaeology, University of Missouri-Columbia, is decorated with a unique intaglio of a large bull, prancing with its head tossed in the air, and standing in front of a tree. The scene is so like that on coins of Corinth showing the Palaimonion that it seems probable that the loomweight was an offering at the classical Palaimonion around 400 B.C. Loomweights were frequently used as votives and in many cases were specially decorated. Since a red-figured vase of the late fifth century B.C. also has the bull-and-tree motif, a common source, perhaps a votive relief, is suggested. (Authors)

The mints in the East (Cilician, Cypriot, Levantine, etc.), the first to register Oriental influence, underwent a considerable orientalization from which they only partially recovered shortly before Alexander's death. This orientalization, which involved both stylistic and iconographic borrowings, is described, and the rôles therein played by the mints of Cilician Tarsus and of Egypt are defined. A planned sequel to this study will trace the spread of orientalism to the mints in the West. (Author)

Early Imperial hoards of aurei, of bronzes and of mixed issues studied for the last 30 years are treated, as are hoards of denarii and antoniniani and, finally, site and excavation finds. Hoards of the Tetrarchy and Constantine are then considered, being divided into two groups separated by the monetary reform of 318. The first group provides rare information about coinage circulation in Gaul before 317. (L. Lotringer)

349 BRUUN, PATRICK. Site Finds and Hoarding Behaviour. Scripta Nummaria Romana. Essays Presented to Humphrey Sutherland. Edited by R.A.G. Carson and Colin M. Kraay (London, Spink 1978) pp. 114-23.

The assertion that coin hoards do not generally reflect the pattern of coins in circulation is tested on the coinage of the early fourth century A.D., and more precisely on the occurrence in coin hoards and site finds of two denominations, the Constantinian centenionalis created in A.D. 311, and the Licinian semi-nummus of 317, worth 12.5 denarii. The composition of the hoards of Nagytétény and Kailak (Pleven) is compared with finds on the excavation sites of Karanis, Oxyrynchus, Vindonissa and Conimbriga. It is concluded that because of the absence of 12.5 denarii pieces in many hoards hoarders carefully selected which objects to save in times of monetary unrest. In addition, the character of 38 hoards found in Karanis is examined. (Author)

From analysis of coin material and hoard evidence it is argued that the series of antoniniani of Trebonianus Gallus and Volusian, attributed variously to Milan and Viminacium, is in fact the final issue from the mint of Rome. The Adventus coins of Constantine the Great produced at the London mint between A.D. 307 and 314 are discussed in the context of the literary and epigraphic sources. A seventeenth-century ms. in the hand of Fouilhac, a noted numismatist, inventorying the ancient coins he had examined either in his own collection or in those of his contemporaries is analyzed. A total of 1,895 coins found in the departments of Lot and Tarn-et-Garonne are described. The buildings and monuments depicted on the coin types of Septimius Severus and his family are considered in detail, arranged according to the regiones into which Augustus had divided the city of Rome. A brief history of each monument is followed by a description of the type; problems of identity and location are considered. The most difficult is that presented by the type of temple of Jupiter Sospitator (A.D. 206), which may have been a small shrine dedicated to Jupiter-Serapis in the palace of Severus on the Palatine. An examination of the metrological development and the rôle played by the fractional coinage in the fluid context of the later third century argues that denarii and quinarii stood in a definite denominational relationship with the antoninianus and that issues were too small and sporadic for them to have been intended to function as small change. The attribution of the bronze coinage of Vespasian of A.D. 70-71 to a number of mints in Spain, Gaul, Italy and Illyricum as proposed by Mattingly in BMCRE 2 is rejected, on the grounds that a detailed die study of sestertii reveals repeated instances of single dies being attributed to more than one mint. More probably the whole output should be allotted to Rome, apart from the well-defined issues with globe at the point of the bust attributable to Lugdunum. According to their obverse legends the sestertii thus minted at Rome during A.D. 71 can be divided into three periods; a count of the reverse types in each period shows the changing themes given prominence by the Flavian government from time to time. Concordia as a political slogan, invoked by those in power, is dealt with. In the second century B.C. the Roman oligarchy did so in the face of opposition from the Gracchi and their followers. Concordia was celebrated in 121 B.C. when the consul L. Opimius built a temple of Concord overlooking the Forum. The following 60 years saw attempts to wrest the slogan from "Optimate" politicians which are reflected in the historical work of C. Licinius Macer, but were decisively defeated by Cicero in 63 B.C., in spite of Julius Caesar's proposed temple of Nova Concordia. Tiberius rebuilt Opimius's temple as a token of devotion to Concord, but the principate entailed a change in the use of the slogan: principes addressed it to partners, wives, and the army; to all who might endanger their power. In the Julio-Claudian coinage of the mint at Rome, which has neither the signature of the moneyers of Augustus nor the officina markings of the third century, a regular pattern is traced through successive issues of multiple reverse types linked by the use of common obverse dies. It is suggested that this indicates an officina system derived from the area of responsibility of the moneyers. (Author)

Attention is first devoted to the contingents of the Roman infantry and the strength of the Roman navy and cavalry from 218 to 202 B.C. The stipends paid to the different kinds of soldiers and officers in the Roman army are studied. The coins actually in use at the moment when the pay had to be delivered are investigated, including the mutations of the as and its divisions, the quadrigatus, and the denarius created in 214. A 1966 hoard and a lot of coins found nearby total 3,727 issues, about 1,000 of which can be weighed and classified. Except for two coins of the consecration of Claudius, they are coppers of 6-15 mm and rarely more than .50 g. Dimensions, weights and legends do not permit classification. The presence of 29 groups of at least five coins each struck with the same dies suggests that the coins were struck at Entrains itself. Kinds of dies and circulation are considered. (L. Lotringer)

474 ROBERTSON, ANNE S. The Circulation of Roman Coins in North Britain: the Evidence of Hoards and Site-Finds from Scotland. Scripta Nummaria Romana. Essays Presented to Humphrey Sutherland. Edited by R.A.G. Carson and Colin M. Kraay (London, Spink 1978) pp. 186-216 maps.

The fewer than 50 hoards of Roman coins recorded from Scotland cover the time span from Domitian to Honorius, but their distribution is excessively thin except for four periods: the reign of Antoninus Pius before, and after, coins of Marcus Caesar and Faustina I became available; the coinage of Commodus and Crispina, and the reign of Septimius Severus. A comparison of hoards of these periods (all, with one exception, of denarii) with site finds of denarii from Scotland shows that they probably all came from military sources. The latter part of the third and the fourth centuries are represented by a few sporadic hoards (all but one of bronze coins) which must have been acquired from elsewhere after the Severan withdrawal from Scotland. A corpus of the Carausian and Allectan coins from the northern frontier of Britain is presented and the coins' implications are discussed. The view that Carausius was responsible for a withdrawal of troops from that frontier which led directly to an invasion from the north is contraindicated and it is suggested that the frontier had been run down long before the Carausian episode because it was regarded as secure. The posthumous part played by both emperors' mothers, and other relatives, in the ideology of the imperial family and dynastic propaganda as promoted by means of the coinage is dealt with. Agrippina and Antonia types of the imperial coinage are discussed with attention to chronology and significance within the framework of Caligula's and Claudius's coinage. Provincial and local coinage bearing representations of Agrippina and Antonia are discussed; their chronology and programmatic context are established. Agrippina was of propagandistic significance only under Caligula and again in the late years of Claudius, Antonia almost exclusively in the first part of the reign of her son, Claudius. A strong influence of the Roman administration on local coinage is demonstrated. Five tables show the chronology and program of Caligula's gold, silver and bronze coinage, of Claudius's gold and silver coinage, and the types of Agrippina and Antonia in non-imperial coinage, their chronology and context. Two official coins were previously unpublished: an antoninianus of Tacitus from Serdica and a follis fraction of Constantius I Chlorus from Trier. The latter was struck in 303, was the most recent specimen found, and offers the terminus post quem for the dating of the filling-in of the well with rubble. (Author)

During excavations of the cellar of a Gallo-Roman house, 27 Gaulish and early Roman coins (the most recent dating from 10-3 B.C.) were discovered. The Gaulish coins include 10 specimens of the Germanus Indutilli L(ibertus) type (Henri de La Tour, Atlas des monnaies gauloises, no. 9248), indicating that the minting of this widespread coinage probably took place partly in the Treveran region (on the Tetelbierg?). A group of 265 late third- and fourth-century Roman coins, recovered from a late Roman cellar, offers an interesting picture of the circulation of bronze coins toward the middle of the fourth century. As an outpost of the Byzantine Empire in the Crimea, Cherson had a local copper coinage of its own struck from the fifth to the seventh centuries A.D., differing from the imperial pattern both in its denominations and in its typology. The earlier issues with old-fashioned types were struck partly in Constantinople for use at Cherson or by dies produced in the Constantinople mint. Under Justin II (after 574) the currency system was brought into line with the imperial one by the introduction of folles and half folles of the common weight standard, depicting several members of the imperial family. The first issues were without the emperor's name, which finally appeared under Maurice. The series was continued by Heraclius and Constans II. For both emperors new gold and bronze attributions are proposed. (Author)

The quantity of gold and silver plaited wire rings is evidence of substantial bullion holdings by private individuals in the tenth and eleventh centuries, despite the lack of richly ornamented swords and finger rings characteristic of the eighth and ninth centuries. It is just possible that some rings can be equated to mancus units, and have some correspondence with coinage weights. (Author)

The legends PACX, PAX and PAXS on three eleventh-century English coin types are considered. Certain difficulties in reading the legends simply as forms of pax are first identified. Attention is then drawn to a form of Christian symbol on eleventh-century Anglo-Saxon charters which is made up of the letters XP (Christos) and A (alpha ?) and could easily be read as PAX. It is suggested that the legends on the coin types in question exploit the potential double meaning of this symbol and can therefore be interpreted as combined invocations of Christ and Peace (Pax Christi). It is shown how this interpretation can explain the difficulties identified at the outset. (Author)

In 1830 a hoard of 24 mediaeval gold coins was discovered at Birkenbringhausen (Hesse-Kassel). The coins have been dispersed, but from contemporary files it is concluded that the hoard consisted primarily of English nobles and rose nobles of Edward III and Edward IV. The hoard also included a French chevalier d'or struck ca. 1360. The coins were buried after 1465, and had possibly been taken to Hesse by a soldier returning home from the siege of Neuss (1474-75). As the hoard is mentioned in numerous files and official reports of 1830, new methods of hoard research in archival sources are demonstrated. (Author)

The value of mint activity as evidence for the relative prosperity of Anglo-Saxon boroughs is examined, and it is argued that the geographical pattern of minting followed a logic of its own, not closely related to economic history. From an analysis of the hoards and stray finds it is shown that Aethelred's coins circulated with remarkable velocity. The corpus of coins from the Lincoln mint, and the Scandinavian finds, are used to compute the total volume of issues, and this information is related to the size of the Danegeld payments. A new interpretation of multiple weight standards is offered: the mints operated different tariffs for English and for foreign silver. Aethelred's monetary policies are assessed in the light of this hypothesis. An appendix gives details of the alloy of the coins, and tables for the seven main issues and 79 mints give detailed estimates of the output of coinage. (Author)

The coins are described according to a proposed letter classification (see NL 102-724), as well as under the "types" of the British Museum catalogue. A classification of sceattas (early-middle Anglo-Saxon small-flan pennies) to replace the various and often chaotic arrangements under types is proposed. It divides them into 24 series designated by letters of the alphabet, generally aiming at a chronological order of commencement and continuing the already accepted A, B and C of the Primary Series. Within the series there is room for sub-classification and tolerance of marginal or imitative material. (Author)

Work on the subject in the 30 years since Sutherland's publication of the Crondall hoard is discussed. A list of additions to the corpus and a bibliography are included. An appendix records the results of all available analyses of fineness. In the light of these, a new chronological framework is proposed for the seventh-century material, following recent revisions of the dating of Merovingian coinage. It is suggested in consequence that the first English tremisses, with Victory reverses, may be dated ca. 600 or earlier. (Author)

A series of Danish coins struck in the names of the English king Aethelred and the Danish kings Cnut, Harthacnut and Magnus the Good is dealt with. The type P. Hauberg, Myntforhold og Udmyntninger i Danmark indtil 1146, Cnut 23 is die-linked to both Harthacnut and Magnus types and coins with the name of Aethelred are die-linked to coins struck in the name of Harthacnut. A coin struck in the name of Edward the Confessor is also die-linked to Harthacnut issues. The coins are from Lund and were presumably struck in the first part of the reign of Magnus (1042-47). Among the Danish hoards of the twelfth century, one of the most important is the "Aalborg hoard" of 1696. New written sources demonstrate this was in fact a double hoard from the village of Øster Uttrup, east of Aalborg. The other part was found in 1708.

The effect of the rediscovery of Roman coin designs and portraiture conventions on coins and medals of Renaissance France is discussed. Such devices as the laurel wreath, paludamentum and cuirass were employed by French rulers who also drew heavily on ancient mythology for reverse types. However, the ancient symbolism was adapted to suit Renaissance social and religious conceptions and gave rise to what was to become a new iconography. (C.E. King)

It is demonstrated that the coin of Sweyn Forkbeard in the Hermitage collection cannot derive from the 1841 Paimio/Pemar hoard, as has been suggested, but was probably found in Estonia in 1838. Attempt at a revision of opinion]. Historia Vol. 30 (Acta Universitatis Wratislaviensis No. 461) (Wrocław 1978) pp. 49-60. German summary.

Views on the beginning of Silesian regional coinage are examined and a chronology is put forward. In the first period, from ca. 1175 to the beginning of the thirteenth century, there were not very numerous bracteates of Bolesław Wysoki and early issues of Henryk Brodaty, struck in Wrocław. In the second period, from the beginning of the thirteenth century to the years after 1241, there were common bracteates of "Rataje" type of Henryk Brodaty and Henryk Pobożny, struck in Wrocław and Legnica. In the third period, from the end of the first half of the thirteenth to the end of the century, there were large Silesian bracteates struck by various princes in scores of mints. English summary.

One hundred thirty-three finds, mainly eighteenth-century (some 2,500 specimens), are analyzed. For the seventeenth century there are mainly Hungarian issues, then Netherlands ducats and later Austrian, German, west Pomeranian, Scandinavian and Russian coins. Polish ducats are very rare, because of the low production, the exchange ration between ducat and thaler, and the nature of the finds (the possessions of middle-class gentry or burghers), for local gold coins were used only by the wealthy. was used by the Hapsburgs. When the duchy was given as security to the Polish king John Casimir, he settled his brother Charles Ferdinand there and the modernized mint was reopened in 1647. Later the duchy was given to the king's wife, Louisa Maria. In 1666 Emperor Leopold I redeemed the duchy, striking his coins at Opole until 1704. The coins of Opole are described and a list of finds is given. (Marta Męclewska)

The monetary views of Polish noblemen are discussed on the basis of legislative acts and literature. Until the second half of the eighteenth century the elements of mercantilism are not common. Speculators, forgers and royal fiscalism were thought to be causes of monetary disturbances. Only Copernicus, Grodwagner and a few Gdańsk citizens held wider views on the point. In the second half of the eighteenth century, under the influence of western merchants, knowledge of money as a factor in economic development increased. (Marta Męclewska)

The Mexican Revolution of 1910-20 cut the towns and cities of Mexico off from their traditional sources of money, thereby engendering local production of coinage and currency, by contending revolutionary groups and by the towns and cities themselves. The process reached a high point between 1913 and 1915, a time of maximum chaos in the revolutionary period, and its decline after 1915 reflected a parallel decline of violence in the political situation. The tokens were issued to the "Septemviri," members of the supreme governing council of the free city of Nuremberg; each bears the name of the member to whom it was issued and enabled the member to pass through the city gates when the gates were officially closed. A manuscript register of the election of members to the council is used to determine which members were entitled to the tokens. The earliest token is dated 1544 and four other tokens can be dated, with the help of the register, between 1544 and 1598. The latest known token is dated 1804. (Author)

THE AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

Founded 1858 · Incorporated 1865

Broadway Between 155th and 156th Streets
New York, N.Y. 10032

PURPOSES: The Society was founded for the collection and preservation of coins, medals, decorations and paper money and for the investigation of their history and other subjects connected therewith.

MEMBERSHIP: Applications for membership are welcomed from all interested in numismatics. Inquiries regarding membership should be addressed to the Secretary of the Society.

DUES: The annual dues for an Associate Membership are fifteen dollars. Issues of the Notes and Monographs, Museum Notes and Numismatic Literature are distributed to all members.

PUBLICATIONS: The American Numismatic Society Museum Notes is a scholarly journal containing articles on numismatic topics. The Numismatic Notes and Monographs consist of separately issued publications, each on a single topic. Numismatic Studies is a series accommodating works in a larger format. Numismatic Literature, published twice each year, is an international abstract bibliography of the current literature in the profession. The Society is also engaged in the systematic publication of its entire Greek coin collection in Sylloge Nummorum Graecorum: American Numismatic Society.

MUSEUM: The Society maintains a museum located in uptown Manhattan, New York City, which houses its offices, collections and library. Collections embrace coins of all periods from their inception to modern times, medals and decorations. Selections from its cabinets are on display in an exhibition. The library, consisting of about 25,000 volumes, covers all branches of numismatics.

The museum is open to Members and the public from 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. In addition, the public exhibition is open on Sundays from 1 to 4 P.M. The museum is closed on Mondays and the following holidays: New Year's Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Independence Day, Election Day, Thanksgiving Day, the fourth Friday in November, the fourth Saturday in November, December 24, Christmas Day. The public exhibition is open from 10 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. on the fourth Friday and the fourth Saturday of November.

PREFACE

Numismatic Literature is a semiannual survey of current publications in or related to numismatics, with abstracts of their contents. Beginning with NL No. 79 (December 1967), bibliographic information and abstracts have been submitted by an international board of contributing editors, each of whom collects material published in his country. The contents and quality of NL reflect the participation of this editorial board and of individual scholars, whose cooperation can create a truly comprehensive bibliographic tool.

The revisions in format introduced in NL 81 have been maintained, to enable each reader to find and use material in his own field more easily, while benefitting from work published in peripheral fields. Each issue of NL is now paged separately, rather than consecutively within each issue, and an abstract can therefore be identified by the issue number together with the abstract number, for example, 81-1. Most entries are grouped under broad cultural, geographical or typological sections. In addition, the section Technology and Methodology lists works in which recently developed techniques for numismatic study are described or significantly applied. The Greek section correlates with the broad definition of Head's Historia Numorum. At the end of each section is a list of numbered cross references to abstracts with related material in other sections.

Author and subject indices are published at the back of each issue. The author index does not include references to the reviews, which are themselves alphabetically arranged by author. The hoard list is a separate list of abstracts in which reference is made to coin hoards.

Periodical titles are abbreviated whenever possible. A cumulative list of periodical title abbreviations is published in the March issue of even-numbered years. Intervening issues contain a cumulative list of additions. In this way, the list should become a record of the periodical publications in many fields in which numismatic material appears, and a convenient compilation of abbreviations for scholars.

Although NL is a bibliography of current publications, an effort is being made to include notices of somewhat older publications which are not readily available, or are published in languages which readers are not likely to know, and which were not discovered until the institution of the international board of contributing editors.

Comments and suggestions for improvement are welcome, and may be addressed to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society. The Editor thanks all those who have contributed to NL, and hopes that participation will continue to grow.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

The Contributing Editors listed below provide the international cooperation necessary for the publication of Numismatic Literature. Each Contributing Editor has assumed the responsibility for collecting and forwarding to the International Editor at the American Numismatic Society titles and abstracts of all works of serious numismatic interest published in his area. In order that NL may offer the most complete, accurate and current coverage possible, each author is strongly urged to prepare an abstract of his own work at the time of publication, and to send it to the Contributing Editor of the country in which the work was published. A guide for the preparation of abstracts follows the list of Contributing Editors.

GUIDE FOR ABSTRACTORS

Entries in Numismatic Literature generally consist of two parts, the bibliographic information and the abstract.

Bibliographic Information

All entries must include the following information:

1. The full name(s) of the author(s)
2. The title of the publication in the original language, but in the Roman alphabet. If the publication is not written in English, French, German or Italian, the original title should be followed by a translation into one of these languages.

If the publication is an article in a journal, the following information must also be given:

3. Volume and/or issue number
4. Date of the journal
5. Date of publication, if it is different from the date of the journal
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is an article in a book of collected works, such as a Festschrift or proceedings of a congress, the following information must also be given:

3. Complete title of the collection
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Page numbers on which the article appears
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the publication is a book, the following information must also be given:

3. Edition number and editor's name, if any
4. Place of publication and name of the publisher
5. Date of publication
6. Total number of pages
7. Number of plates or other illustrations, maps, diagrams, etc.

If the content of the publication is general in nature and does not include specific information or arguments which should be brought to the reader's attention, and the title is fully descriptive of the contents, the bibliographic information alone may be given and the abstract omitted.

The Abstract

Definition. An abstract is a concise, objective summary or description of the content of a publication. It is different from a review in that an abstract does not offer critical comment or additions to the original work. Length. Abstracts may be from about 50 to 200 words in length, depending upon the importance or complexity of the publication. A long abstract may be desirable when the original publication is not readily available, or is written in a language most readers are not likely to know. Style and Language. Abstracts should be written in complete sentences. They may be submitted in English, French, German or Italian, but will be published in English. All abstracts must include the typewritten, full name of the abstractor.

Non-Current Titles

The International Editor of Numismatic Literature maintains a control file, grouped by country of publication, of all new title cards entered into the Society's library card catalogue. Cards are removed from this control file as the relevant titles are received from the Contributing Editors. Title cards in the control file are published as they become three years old in order to prevent omission of these titles. Publication of such entries is necessarily limited to bibliographical information only.

Abstracts intended for publication in the September 1980 issue of Numismatic Literature should be received at the editorial office of the American Numismatic Society, Broadway at 155th Street, New York, N.Y. 10032, not later than May 15, 1980.

The coins came from two private collections: the Andreopoulos collection is interesting because most of its coins are in excellent condition and many Greek mints are represented; the portion from the Meletopoulos collection is ca. 800 coins with a distinct emphasis on mainland Greece and Athens. The Meletopoulos collection as a whole was amassed in the second half of the nineteenth century. (Mando Caramessini Oeconomides)

Energy-dispersive x-ray fluorescence analyses have been made of 14 uncleaned silver coins. Silver, copper, and lead percentages are given. the Swiss National Museum. The hoard consisted of two groups of "Büschelquinarii," some small silver of Manching types I and II, and two unknown pieces. From numismatic and technical analyses it becomes clear that the two groups of Büschelquinarii were minted in two workshops with different raw material but at the same time, and that the small silver pieces were used as quarter denarii within the same monetary system. The development of the Gorgon type in Etruscan art is surveyed, in order to create stylistic parameters for Etruscan coinage with Gorgon. Coins of Theze with running Gorgon can be dated to the second quarter of the fifth century; the series with Gorgoneion and XX and that of Sambon, Les monnaies antiques de l'Italie no. 36, to the first half of the third century; that with Gorgoneion and X must have begun in the last third of the fifth century. constructed from Diodorus. The archaic tetradrachm of the Aetnaeoi with quadriga guided by Athena/Zeus enthroned comes from Syracuse ca. 470, the first of the emissions of the demareteion and the model for the nomismata of Aetna and Leontini. Leontini was allied to Syracuse in a symmachy which is attested by the coins of both cities. On the basis of an evaluation of Diodorus's sources, the dating of the demareteion is moved to 463 B.C. This entails a revision of the chronology of the issues of Syracuse, Catana, Nexus, Aetna-Inessa, Himera, and Selinus. (Sara Sorda)

Syracuse and its influence]. NomKhron Nos. 5-6 (1978) pp. 24-26 illus.

The conclusions which can be drawn from the 1925 Naro hoard are that: Syracusan decadrachms are coins, not medallions; that Euainetos decadrachms are later than Kimon ones; the signed Kimon decadrachms precede the unsigned ones of Kimonian type and the signed Euainetos decadrachms were struck before the unsigned ones of the same type; the Agrigentum decadrachms are older than those of Syracuse; the Syracusan decadrachm coinage falls into the reign of Dionysus I; the old theory that these larger silver coins were victory issues which appeared soon after 413 must be abandoned. It is also observed that Kimon's influence was far reaching and it is surprising, therefore, how few copies of his work there are in Syracuse itself, in Sicily, or in Magna Graecia. In Greece, Asia Minor, and even in Syria-Palestine, however, evidence of his influence is great.

A small gold coin found in 1974 at Mamoussia has obv. and rev.: dove flying r., like the doves on the silver obols of Sicyon of the fourth century B.C. The style indicates this is a regular issue, though the weight is a bit light for an obol on the Aeginetan standard. Cretan imitations of Hyrtacina and Lissus issues of the same metal and type, but very different in style, suggest that the workshop at Sicyon must have issued gold obols. (Author)

The weight system of Locri is reconstructed from the Locrian tablets on the basis of the indication of products, sums, and values. The units of measure used include the talent, the stater, the litra, and the uncia. The system documented at the "temple of Dionysus I" in Sicily is compared to that at Locri. The tablets testify to a difference at Locri between the weight and the coinage systems. The unity of the deca- and pentakorintios at Locri is interpreted as "silver staters of Corinthian weight." This interpretation explains other indications about weight and permits a more secure chronology for the coinage. (Sara Sorda)

The mints operating in Magna Graecia between the sixth and fourth centuries B.C. are discussed and silver coinage of Locri is fitted into the picture. Four series of Locrian issues are analyzed: that with Corinthian type dated 344-310 B.C. and destined for the East; that with "local" type, dated 334/3-280, which circulated locally; the gold, and the bronze series. Pre-Roman coinage circulation at Locri is treated and the function of the coinage is considered. (Sara Sorda)

of the era has long been recognized as 134/3 B.C. The exclusive use of this era at Ephesus shows that it was an Ephesian, not a provincial, era; it is argued that it reflects Attalus III's bequest of liberty to the city, which was subsequently confirmed by the Romans after the organization of Asia as a province. A hoard of Parthian coins of the Arsacids from the close of the third century B.C. contained coins modelled on Achaemenid issues. The legends and types testify to the strength of the old Persian tradition and should be seen as a manifestation of the desire to counter the influence of Greek culture and underscore the anti-Macedonian stance of Persian rulers. By the exaltation of the aeternitas augusti, Maxentius intended to proclaim himself the sole guarantor and defender of the eternity of Rome and her traditions. Forty Roman coins were recovered from a river near Bourne End. A.D. 270. (E. Marles)

Rome did not use her own or others' money in 280 B.C., but Roman authors make anachronistic references to monetary experiments of that period. Timaeus intended to attribute to Servius Tullius not the introduction of bronze coinage but the designation of a metallic unity of a set weight, the aes. The concentration of mobile wealth attested in the necropolis of the Lazio, as well as the introduction of the stipendium (406 B.C.) and the tributum, support this view. (Sara Sorda)

Factors that determined the location of mints and the function and supply of bronze coinage in the Roman Empire during the fourth century A.D. are considered. The survey is based primarily on a comparison of site assemblages which cover the century, although in their absence hoards provide useful comparisons. Aspects of minting activity and coin circulation in both the western and the eastern empire are discussed, but the distribution of the most satisfactory material has biased the survey to Britain and the German provinces. It is argued that imperial policy toward the mints was strongly influenced by development and change in regional economies. (Author)

The hoard was deposited at the beginning of the reign of Gallienus, possibly at the time of the barbarian invasions on the Rhine frontier. (L. Lotringer)

A hoard of 326 pieces was found, but many of the coins were entirely oxidized and did not survive the necessary cleaning. The 250 survivors, many in very poor condition, probably over-represent the larger types earlier than 330, and there has doubtless been a heavy toll of the imitations of the post-330 coinage. A single coin of Constans shows that the date can be no earlier than 334, and there are no examples of the GLORIA EXERCITVS "one standard" issue that must have begun about the end of 335. In contrast to the events of the early Empire, in the third-fourth centuries the growing political and economic crisis and devaluation of money caused chaos on the monetary market. The use of pecuniary payments and payments in kind is attested by ancient authors, inscriptions, and numismatic finds. Coins were usually evaluated in terms of precious metal, not by denominational value. (Marta Męclewska)

During the first century there was a strong tendency toward unification through concentration on coin production in Rome. The structure of the coinage was improved, especially after Nero's reform, and permanent production of coins increased under the direct authority of rulers in mint affairs. Liquidation of local mints in the West and development of local bronze coinage in the East created two spheres of circulation, eastern and western, from which only Egypt was excluded. In the end of the first century the Roman coinage was well adapted to the needs of the state. (Marta Męclewksa)

Nero's reform of currency is dated to the year 64. The aspect of the reform regarding precious metals is analyzed. The measure was prompted by development of the economy and by the cost of the silver currency itself. Just after Nero's reform the size of the issues in silver increased enormously, as hoard evidence attests. (Sara Sorda)

The theory of Tacitus is tested against the results of examination of hoards found in parts of Germany not subject to Rome and dateable between the reform of Nero and the Dacian conquest. A varied picture emerges: the oldest hoards have a higher percentage of old coins, including bigati and serrati; the newer hoards have more and different types. There were more bigati and serrati in Eastern Europe than in Germania. (Sara Sorda)

The distribution and nature of inscriptions mentioning sums of money are analyzed. A distinction is made among the terms used in different and specific contexts. The ratio between monetary units is also considered. The epigraphic data are brought to bear on the study of devaluations. (Sara Sorda)

Literary and juridical sources, as well as a series of recently published Oxyrynchus papyri, are considered in order to clarify the nature of the tesserae. These seem to be permanent documents, which granted certain rights and could be purchased or bequeathed. However, only certain categories of people had access to them. Tesserae frumentariae are thought to have been small rectangular wooden tablets, a reproduction of which is preserved on Lollius Palicanus's silver sestertius (BMCRR Vol. 1, no. 4017). The appearance of a persona and permanent document for the frumentationes is attributed to Caesar's time. (Sara Sorda)

The origin and development of the guards' helmets on the Pfersee/Berkasovo type is studied with the help of numismatic material from Mithradates II of Parthia to Justinian I. It is concluded that the late Roman guards' helmets are an indirect borrowing from the Persian helmet. (Bernhard Schulte)

sons of Gallienus. The assumption of the title of Augustus by Saloninus is documented on coins and not elsewhere and is transmitted from the last issue of Cologne. The date of the death of Saloninus is determined from evidence on issues of Cologne and Milan. A chronology of events in the East is fixed on the basis of the activity of the mint of Antioch and the second mint of Asia. The Danube and Rhine campaigns of Gallienus are attested on issues of Viminacium, Cologne, and Milan, and these same issues make possible a precise dating of the caesarates of Valerian Junior and Saloninus. To gauge the quantity of currency produced by the Rome mint, the mint marks found on a single coin are considerd. Evidence of distribution of these marks on the denarii indicates such coins were put in circulation in groups from four obverse and five reverse dies. Between 126 and 18 B.C., the mint used 1,000 pounds of silver for each operation, thus striking ca. 84,000 denarii. (Sara Sorda)

The reference to nummi novi in the prologue of the Casina alludes to a situation in reality, and line 10, where such a reference is made, is not by Plautus, but by a later author of Apulian origin. The expression is thought to refer to bronze currency and was used in Apulia as such. The despised new nummi must be the bronze coins which were subject to devaluations in the years 155-150. The alteration of the Casina's prologue is thought to date to the same years. (Sara Sorda)

This one, with I on the obverse and Θ on the reverse, takes over the local tradition of indictional and regnal dating on each side of the coin and demands a return to the old dating of the end of the first reign in September, rather than July, 695. Imitative bronze issues of the sixth century of Justin II, Tiberius II, and Mauritius Tiberius, struck in the name of Phocas, belonged to a semi-official issue, "moneta militaris imitativa." The existence of imitative issues in the name of Phocas does not destroy the hypothesis that the coins were issued during the revolt of Heraclius against Phocas, but shows that a single explanation and attribution of the "moneta militaris imitativa" to a certain period cannot be accepted without reservations. A 1975 hoard found at the Romano-Byzantine castellum of Iatrus, near Krivina, contained 45 gold Byzantine solidi. Their chronology and type permit a division of the issues into two groups. The first consists of 28 coins with portraits of Romanus I and his son, Christophorus, and is dated 921-31. The second is 17 issues with portraits of Constantine VII and his son, Romanus II, struck between 945 and 959.

The contents of a hoard buried somewhere near Diyarbakir after 291 H./A.D. 903-4 indicate that monetary circulation in this area was mainly regional, as most of the coins come from mints located in Mesopotamia. The presence of four coins from Andaraba, in eastern Khurāsān, demonstrates the importance of silver mining. The majority of the dirhams date from 279 to 289 H. The composition of the hoard is in clear contrast to contemporary Russian and Scandinavian hoards, where mints from north of the Oxus dominate. Die analysis also revealed that the weights of dirhams struck by the same pair of dies were extremely variable. (Peter Ilisch)

Analysis of the substantive types of common copper Kushāna coins indicates that the Kushāna pantheon reflects the popular religion of Persia, described by Herodotus and Strabo, of Mithra (the sun); Mao (the moon); the four elements represented as Graeco-Roman personifications; and divinities that preside over the seven planets. These correspond to the seven grades of Roman Mithraism and both may be drawn from a common heritage in Lower Mesopotamia. (Author)

Muminabad-Bindraban and at Islamabad-Mathura. ONSN No. 49 (June 1977) pp. [3-4].

These two mint towns situated south of Delhi lay in the borderland between the powerful states of Bharatpur and Awadh. Local coins struck during the years around A.D. 1800 show the influence of such neighbors. Coins may bear the umbrella symbol of the Mughal emperor, the dagger of the Bharatpur Jats, or the fish of the Awadh nawabs. (Author)

The idea of having many deities on Kushāna coins seems to have been inspired by the moneyers' knowledge of Roman coin types and cults of the Roman orient. The heterogeneous religious elements in Kushāna coinage betray an eclectic attitude of the rulers toward religion.

A hoard of 14 silver mediaeval coins found in or about 1968 consisted of five groats of Edward IV (first reign) and nine pennies dating from the reigns of Edward I-II to Edward IV, all very worn and, except for one of Henry VI, 1422-27, clipped. The date of deposit was probably ca. 1468 but a later date cannot be ruled out. (E. Marles)

Details are given of 12 fifteenth-century English gold coins which came to light in Harrogate, Yorkshire. The earliest issues are two half ryals of Edward IV, York mint, struck in 1465-66. The latest is a Richard III angel, mint mark boar head/sun and rose with king's name RICARD and large reverse cross. If this group of coins may be regarded as a complete and independent entity, it is the only hoard of gold coins from England known to have closed in the reign of Richard III. The date of deposit is most likely 1483-85, but a date as late as ca. 1490 remains a possibility. (E. Marles)

Lucca e Siena tra la metà dell'XI e la metà del XII secolo. Studi per Enrico Fiumi (Pisa, Pacini 1979) pp. 141-48.

Commercial documents of Pisa, Lucca and Siena demonstrate that prices were frequently stabilized by substituting objects such as seals, gold or silver rings, silver cups, and gold fibulae for money. In many cases the monetary value of the objects is not given. The objects seem, therefore, to be tokens to be redeemed. (Sara Sorda)

Carl Friedrich Evers was among the first German authors to write a regional monetary history based both on the knowledge of coins and on archival sources. By profession an archivist, Evers combined the methods of numismatic description with studies in archival sources. He is known as the reformer of the ducal archives at Schwerin and proved a prolific author in the fields of law, history, and numismatics. His Mecklenburgische Münz-Verfassung (1798-99) is still the standard reference work for the monetary history of Mecklenburg. (Author)

The coin collection of the Hessian State Archives of Marburg contains 905 casts struck on tin planchets from dies of the landgravate of Hesse-Kassel, the kingdom of Westphalia, the electorate of Hesse, the county of Schaumburg, the bishopric of Fulda, and the county of Hanau. Until the nineteenth century coin dies were usually taken to the archives where they could be kept in safe custody. In 1883 the dies had to be sent to the Royal Mint at Berlin which returned a pair of casts from each die. The newly organized collection also contains ca. 300 coins found in various files. It is pointed out that the connection between these coins and the files from which they were taken is extremely important for numismatic research. Preservation of this connection is discussed and examples of archival numismatic research are demonstrated. The same article is published in Aus Geschichte und ihren Hilfswissenschaften. Festschrift für Walter Heinemeyer zum 65. Geburtstag. Edited by Hermann Bannasch and Hans-Peter Lachmann (Veröffentlichungen der Historischen Kommission für Hessen No. 40) (Marburg 1979) pp. 497-527. (Author)

The hoard is a typical Pomeranian hacksilber find and consists of 1,240 European issues and 1,000 unidentifiable fragments. It was buried between 1002 and 1014 and the oldest coins date to 948-55. It includes Saxon pennies, Scandianvian half bracteates, Otto-Adelheid pennies, and issues of Lüneburg, Quedlinburg, West Germany-Rhineland, Regensburg-Augsburg, Bohemia, Italy, and England. The gold coins struck by Frederick II of Hohenstaufen at Messina and Brindisi in 1231 and following years had weights of 5.25-5.30 g and a fineness of 20.5 carats, also attested by neutron activation. Identification of 75 obverse and 108 reverse dies gives evidence for a rather large output. An attempt is made to distinguish the issues of each mint. The Augustan origin of the types is commented on, but there is some realism in the features of the emperor, at least on the coins of the last emissions. (Paul Naster)

A monetary history of the regions included in modern Greece, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Albania, and parts of Romania is presented. Byzantine coinages were current for most of the period studied, but the survey covers also the Serbian, Bosnian, Bulgarian, and Wallachian series, and the issues of Achaea, Athens, and other parts of Frankish Greece, Dubrovnik (Ragusa), Koter, Split, and the foreign (Venetian) coins which circulated in southeastern Europe. There are maps showing the location of some hundreds of hoards, and a bibliography. (Author)

Museo Civico Speleo-Archeologico, mostra (Sassari, Dessì 1978) pp. 81-83 illus.

A fragment of a new oxhide ingot, weighing 502.5 g, was found at Perdas è floris. Twenty other small fragments, presumably of an ingot of the same kind and weighing 1,894.6 g total, were found with it. Three similar fragments are known from the Nuoro province. Another piece, of 25 g, is of uncertain attribution. Most of the fragments are preserved in Nuoro's Civic Museum, one is in the Giacobbe collection. (Sara Sorda)
